

AMA TRANSITION TO COLLEGE LED TRAINING WEBINAR
2 DECEMBER 2021

CHAT & QUESTIONS SUBMITTED DURING THE SESSION

Andrew Gosbell	Thanks for organising this webinar. We are aware that not everyone is able to make this time, so will a recording be available afterwards that all trainees can view?
Biz Meike	One big restriction with the current RTO-led training is that it's practically impossible to change between areas (and therefore RTOs) without doing the Independent Pathway route. Will this change make it easier to do training in more than one state?
Ben Dodds	ACRRM has a robust curriculum and assessment without the need to change during Transition
Biz Meike	Are existing registrars transitioning to the new model, or do they complete their training under the old system?
Michael Hand	Are existing registrars transitioning to the new model, or do they complete their training under the old system?
Michael Hand:	How will the transition reverse the year-on-year decline in the number of applicants for GP training? What incentives will help residents choose GP training over hospital-based training?
Rebecca Irwin	The plan is for it be much much easier to move training locations and move around Australia with ACRRM training
Naomi Jupp:	How confident are the colleges that they will be able to meet the KPIs/requirements in the grant opportunity (yet to be confirmed) and their share of funding (yet to be determined) in the shortening time frame?
Chris Harnden	Can we have a specific idea of what training will look like for registrars in the future? Will there be a 2 practice requirement? Will registrars be required to place remotely if they work in the NT??
Peter Maguire	I lived through the last transition from college led training to the RTPs/RTOs. The transition of corporate knowledge and human resources was difficult and quite disruptive to registrars - I wonder how we can avoid that again! Of more concern, the reason this is happening seems to be the Department's dissatisfaction with the workforce outcomes for hard-to-fill rural. It looks like they don't trust the colleges to fix that so are setting up "priority placement" organisations. How do the colleges see that working?

Michele Luey	As a supervisor of both RACGP and ACRRM registrars definitely interested in more communication between ACRRM and supervisors on the ground.
Belinda Jennings	Will it still be possible to do dual RACGP/ACRRM training?
Michele Luey	Will supervisor accreditation or practice accreditation be separate for each college?
Jessica Phillips-Yelland	I'm undertaking the FARGP, and wondering if there will be changes to this qualification with college based training?
Dan Wilson:	And if any GP Registrars are AMA members, they can contact their local AMA for employment related issues. Alternatively, GPRA are fantastic for support on all matters Employment also!
Peter Maguire	The matching of registrars to practices will need to occur mid 2022 for the 2023 year - who will manage that allocation process?
Biz Meike	Many thanks - very useful webinar.
